

Dear Sir:

Please do not weaken the Indiana law on telephone solicitation. This law has worked very well. Except for the recent political campaign {which is one of the exceptions} when I recieved quite a few political calls, my unsolicited phone calls are down to less than one every two to three months from an average of three to four a week. It is nice to sit down to a meal without getting an unwanted call interrupting it.